segmentation of medical images with transformer encoders reduces the size of the original images while the decoder keeps spatial detail and the performance of the model slightly decreased on several datasets when the input resolution was reduced to 128 by 128 for training

FIGURE 11. Qualitative comparison of different predictions on different datasets by visualization. On a specific set of images covered by a red rectangular, the input, prediction, and ground are organized from the left to the right.

medical images with transformer encoders reduces the size of the original images while the decoder keeps spatial detail and the performance of the model slightly decreased on several transformer encoders reduces the size of the original images while the decoder keeps spatial detail and the performance of the model slightly decreased on several datasets when the input reduces the size of the original images while the decoder keeps spatial detail and the performance of the model slightly decreased on several datasets when the input resolution was reduced to 128 by 128 for training segmentation of medical images with transformer encoders